Eulogy

We are here gathered to console each other due to the loss of our beloved sister, mother and friend, Taddeletch Kidanemariam Gebru. Taddeletch was born in Adwa on December 13th, 1945, the second of ten children. She attended elementary school in Axum and Adwa and high school at Empress Menen in Addis Ababa. She then joined Haile Selassie University Business College where her stance for equality, human rights, and social justice for disadvantaged people formed which was the guiding principle throughout her life.

Taddeletch fought for her principles with exceptional courage and patriotism. She paid for her belief dearly. She shed her blood, was captured, tortured and sentenced to years of imprisonment. While continuing her fight and hiding as a fugitive from the Ethiopian security forces she gave birth to her son, Gebray. Understanding the importance of the struggle and the future for her new family she left her four months old baby with her aunt and continued the fight in the countryside. After years of effort, she made the hard decision to leave Ethiopia.

She migrated to the Netherlands in 1980s with her family and was blessed with the birth of a daughter, Selamawit. She sacrificed a lot during her time in Ethiopia and made it her mission to focus on the well-being of her children here in the Netherlands. She succeeds in producing compassionate, intelligent, hardworking children who have combined the best qualities of the Ethiopian and Dutch cultures.

While raising her children she worked in the fields of Pharmacology, Information Technology, and teaching the Amharic language to foreigners traveling to Ethiopia. She was involved in voluntary and community activities primarily focused on humanitarian goals. A couple of examples are the Ethiopian Women's Council in the Netherlands, the International Women's Committee, and Ethiopian Children language Curriculum Development in the Netherlands.

For the last 40+ years Taddeletch had a humble life living in the Netherlands full of peace and good health. She had an extensive network of friends and relatives and was engaged in her neighborhood community. She was full of fun and laughter and enjoyed admiring nature and reading books. In the last seven months she was diagnosed with terminal cancer and in spite of it fought with grace as is expected of Tadi.

She was overwhelmed with sickness for only a couple of days and passed away surrounded by her children and siblings on May 3 rd ,2023. While battling this disease she kept the same determination and attitude to life as she would do every day before this disease. The family used this time to share her love and maintain the bond that binds us together. We are grateful for the time we were able to share with our Tadi.
